Satsuma-kiriko (cut glass)

The beautiful colors of Satsuma, restored after 100 years.

Satsuma-kiriko traces its origins to Nariakira Shimadzu (the 28th Lord), but was not produced for 100 years following that. However, it was revived in 1984, via the workmanship of modern artisans. The Western flair of Satsuma-kiriko offers us a new spice to our life.

Card Holder
Business cards that smell like Yakusu might bring a smile to your business partner's face.

Watch
Wearing only 2 grams, feel the gentle touch of cedar against your skin.

I love its beautiful grain and soothing smell. Yakusu cedar have lived for more than 1000 years, so we should treat them properly.

Yaku-sugi Cedar Products

The life of a thousand-year tree shines afresh, in the warmth of its bark.

Yaku-sugi cedar are trees that have lived on Yakushima, a world heritage island, for more than 1000 years. As cutting down these trees is prohibited, fallen trees are used to make furniture, Buddhist altars, stationery and other accessories.
